Slovenia is a small and export-oriented economy. It is a member of the Eurozone. Its main export market is the European Union (3/4 of total exports) primarily in equipment and the automotive sector.. Public debt is fairly high (a legacy of the global financial crisis), it reached 80% by 2020. It is expected to remain at a fairly high level in the medium and long term considering the rising cost of the healthcare and pension systems. The public sector's weight in the economy remains significant, and privatisation of state assets has been underway for several years. Nevertheless, this process is likely to remain slow given political constraints.

Despite elements of economic strength (high per capita income, competitive export-oriented sector and prudent fiscal policy), the Slovenian economy is vulnerable to economic conditions in the eurozone, and the unfavourable demographic trend (rapidly aging population) creates medium-term challenges for the pension and health systems.

Exports to EU and tourism activity (around 10% of GDP) have been hard hit by the pandemic. Nevertheless, European fiscal and monetary support, as well as healthy public finances, should soften the impact of the crisis on public finances and growth prospects.

Market overview

Cash remains an important payment method in Slovenia, especially for low-value retail transactions. However, there is a shift towards electronic payment methods, particularly card-based payments. In 2020, Flik, Slovenia's national instant P2P money transfer system was launched enabling P2P transactions.

Electronic credit transfers are the most widely used instrument by companies to make supplier and payroll payments. Domestic credit transfers accounted for 52.4% of the total number of payments through Slovenia's payment systems in 2019 (15.9% of the value). Card payments are also on the rise but, according to Mastercard Slovenia, as many as three-quarters of SMEs in Slovenia do not accept cards. Mastercard has launched an initiative which aims to encourage as many small businesses in Slovenia as possible to make a transition to digital payment methods. EUR 1 million will be made available to selected participants in the next three years.

Electronic banking services are available from all banks in Slovenia. Transaction and balance reporting and transaction initiation services are available. Digital-only banks and the digitalisation of services by traditional banks has driven the widespread adoption of digital banking services in Slovenia and most routine services are now performed online. There were one million individual users of online banking at the end of Q1 2021 (71,201 in Q1 2020) and 999,398 users of mobile banking (800,925 in Q1 2020).

Bankart provides the E-invoice system which enables digital exchange of invoices and other documents between the participants in this system.
